

International Society for Complementary Medicine Research

The International Society for Complementary Medicine Research (ISCMR) is an international scientific organization of researchers, practitioners and policy makers that foster Complementary and Integrative Medicine research and provides a platform for knowledge and information exchange to enhance international communication and collaboration.

GOALS

- Facilitate communication and collaboration among researchers and practitioners with an interest in research on a worldwide basis.
- Provide access to Complementary Medicine research information (internationally relevant events, conferences, publications, funding).
- Provide access to an international database of ISCMR members.
- Provide reduced Journal subscription rates and international meeting registration fees.
- Collaborate with individual researchers (or teams), regional societies, professional organizations and research networks to further mutual goals related to research and development agendas.
- Organize an annual Complementary Medicine Research meeting.
